

Daedalus and Icarus

New Zealand 401Ad. Daedalus and Icarus on a windy morning were asked by the king's guards to visit the king in his palace. The king asked Daedalus and Icarus to build a cage for the Minotaur to go in so it can't escape the island.

Daedalus and Icarus finished building the cage in six weeks. They were very tired and they were sick of building everything for the king. The king said the cage wasn't good enough for the minotaur to go in so he put them in a palace like a prison and they weren't allowed to leave.

Then Daedalus had an idea and it was to build some wings out of feathers and then Icarus called, “that’s never going to work Daedalus!” When Daedalus finished making it they jumped on the palace window and flew. when they were flying Daedalus asked Icarus not to fly to high to the sun otherwise the waxes will melt and you will fall okay replied Icarus then a gang of bad seagulls pecked at them both but then Icarus flew to high then and fell and died.
