On Monday we went on a class trip to Vindolanda which is in Northumberland. That afternoon we came to a door which led us to a big space with two castles and a big area with bricks. The bricks looked like a maze but it was for the pipes to go thru to warm up the room after that we pretended to be Roman's and Celts fighting.

The first thing we did was go in a room with a projector of a man called venus he tort us how to count to three in Rome. There is a other thing we learned the story the tortoise and the hare was by a roman author I have read it before. He even tort us how to greet other people it was fun.

The second thing we did was go in the museam. We found some interesting things like mosaics , pots and other great things. then We found something like a bow and arrow with numbers on the side.

This is us on Hadrians wall it used to be very tall but now it is lower. If you look down the wall on the right hand side of the wall is England and the other side is Scotland and the middle is called no mans land.
